Watering produce with oil drilling wastewater seems to have struck a nerve

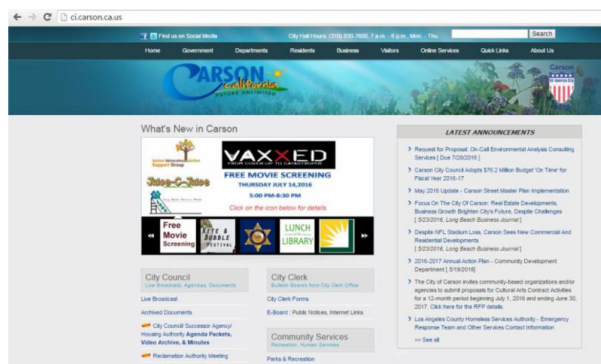

Not just here, in Carson but around the world, our last email struck a nerve with the question if it is "Just a coincidence that the epidemic of autism hit after the first crops went out to market?"

The City of Carson's response; promote a debunked movie that claims autism is caused by the MMR vaccine. It's an outrage for our city to risk the progress made with autism by promoting this smoke screen.

The autism epidemic began approximately two years after the watering of our produce with oil drilling wastewater began. In addition to that, in 2011 when we experienced a surge in oil drilling, we also experienced a surge in autism.

It seems the very suggestion struck a nerve for the City of Carson to allow the promoting this FREE Movie Screening and theory. This movie is a disgrace to the families affected by autism and the work accomplished over two decades.

Below is a screenshot of the City of Carson's website promoting the movie Vaxxed.

7 things about vaccines and autism that the movie 'Vaxxed' won't tell you

By Ariana Eunjung Cha May 25

In this Washington Post article you will learn the most important thing to know is that the link between vaccines and autism has been debunked - widely and repeatedly.

In 2011, the British medical journal the BMJ published a detailed investigation into the research, calling it an "elaborate fraud" by Wakefield. Dozens of top journals - including the New England Journal of Medicine, the Journal of Pediatric Infectious Diseases and the Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders have published papers that looked into a possible link and found none. A study in JAMA in April 2015 was one of the largest; it involved an analysis of 96,000 children. The authors wrote that their findings "indicate no harmful association between MMR vaccine receipt and [autism spectrum disorder] even among children already at higher risk."

While experts still don't know what causes autism, it is thought to be a combination of genetic and environmental factors such as infections or exposure to certain chemicals that may lead to differences in the shape and structure of a child's brain.

What the experts say

Do vaccines cause autism?

Vaccines do not cause autism. Despite much controversy on the topic, researchers haven't found a connection between autism and childhood vaccines. In fact, the original study that ignited the debate years ago has been retracted.

Autism Speaks statement on vaccinations

Over the last two decades, extensive research has asked whether there is any link between childhood vaccinations and autism. The results of this research are clear: Vaccines do not cause autism.

Like thieves in the night

After being exposed for trying to pass a ban on fracking, which contained a loophole that held the city and residents responsible for the expected profits of the oil that resides under our homes, the City of Carson all together abandons banning fracking.

They could have removed the loophole and passed the ban. However, like thieves in the night On June 21, 2016 city council returned from closed session and it was reported the ban on fracking was dropped. That an agreement was reached and with a vote of 4 to 1, the ban on fracking was dead.

One of the results of passing the ban on fracking with the loophole includes fracking at the risk of the residents. The result of this agreement is yet to be known. We requested a copy of this so called agreement that had not been completed at the time of the fracking ban being dropped and to date have not received an answer to that request.

Banning Fracking is not the answer; the City of Carson must adopt No New Drilling with a phase out of existing wells.

Fruits & Nuts Watered with Oil Drilling Waste Water

While we are on the subject of water, did you ever imagine we would be using oil-drilling wastewater to water our produce? Farmers are watering our grapes, pistachio, and Halos tangerines with wastewater. Yes, Halos which targets our children, waters with oil drilling wastewater. Just a coincidence that the epidemic of autism hit after the first crops went out to market?

Is There Really an Autism Epidemic?

A closer look at the statistics suggests something more than a simple rise in incidence.

If the statistic one in 166 has a familiar ring, perhaps that's because you recently heard it on a television commercial or read it in a magazine. According to widely publicized estimates, one in 166 is now the proportion of children who suffer from autism. This proportion is astonishingly high compared with the figure of one in 2,500 that autism researchers had accepted for decades. Across a mere 10-year period--1993 to 2003--statistics from the U.S. Department of Education revealed a 657 percent increase in the nationwide rate of autism.
